Since the beginning of 2015 through May 31, 2020, Haynes and Boone, LLP has tracked the filing of 209 oilfield services (OFS) bankruptcies, detailing the secured and unsecured debt for each case. The total amount of aggregate debt administered in oilfield services bankruptcies during this period is more than $77 billion. During 2018 through 2019, the OFS bankruptcy filings decreased both in number (33 filings) and in aggregate debt ($11.9 billion) compared to 2017 (approximately 40 filings and aggregate debt of $35 billion). As we near the end of the second quarter of 2020, extreme financial pressure is being felt at all levels of the energy industry. Producers, gatherers and other midstream companies, refiners and marketers are abruptly adjusting to the “new normal” in a post-COVID-19 world.

With immediate cutbacks in producers’ CapEx budgets for drilling, completions and other activities in the field, oilfield service companies will feel the brunt of this impact. Many smaller or highly leveraged OFS companies may not be able to hold on, avoiding seeking protection of the bankruptcy courts. Haynes and Boone will continue to monitor this sector in 2020 for any additional bankruptcy filings should they occur.

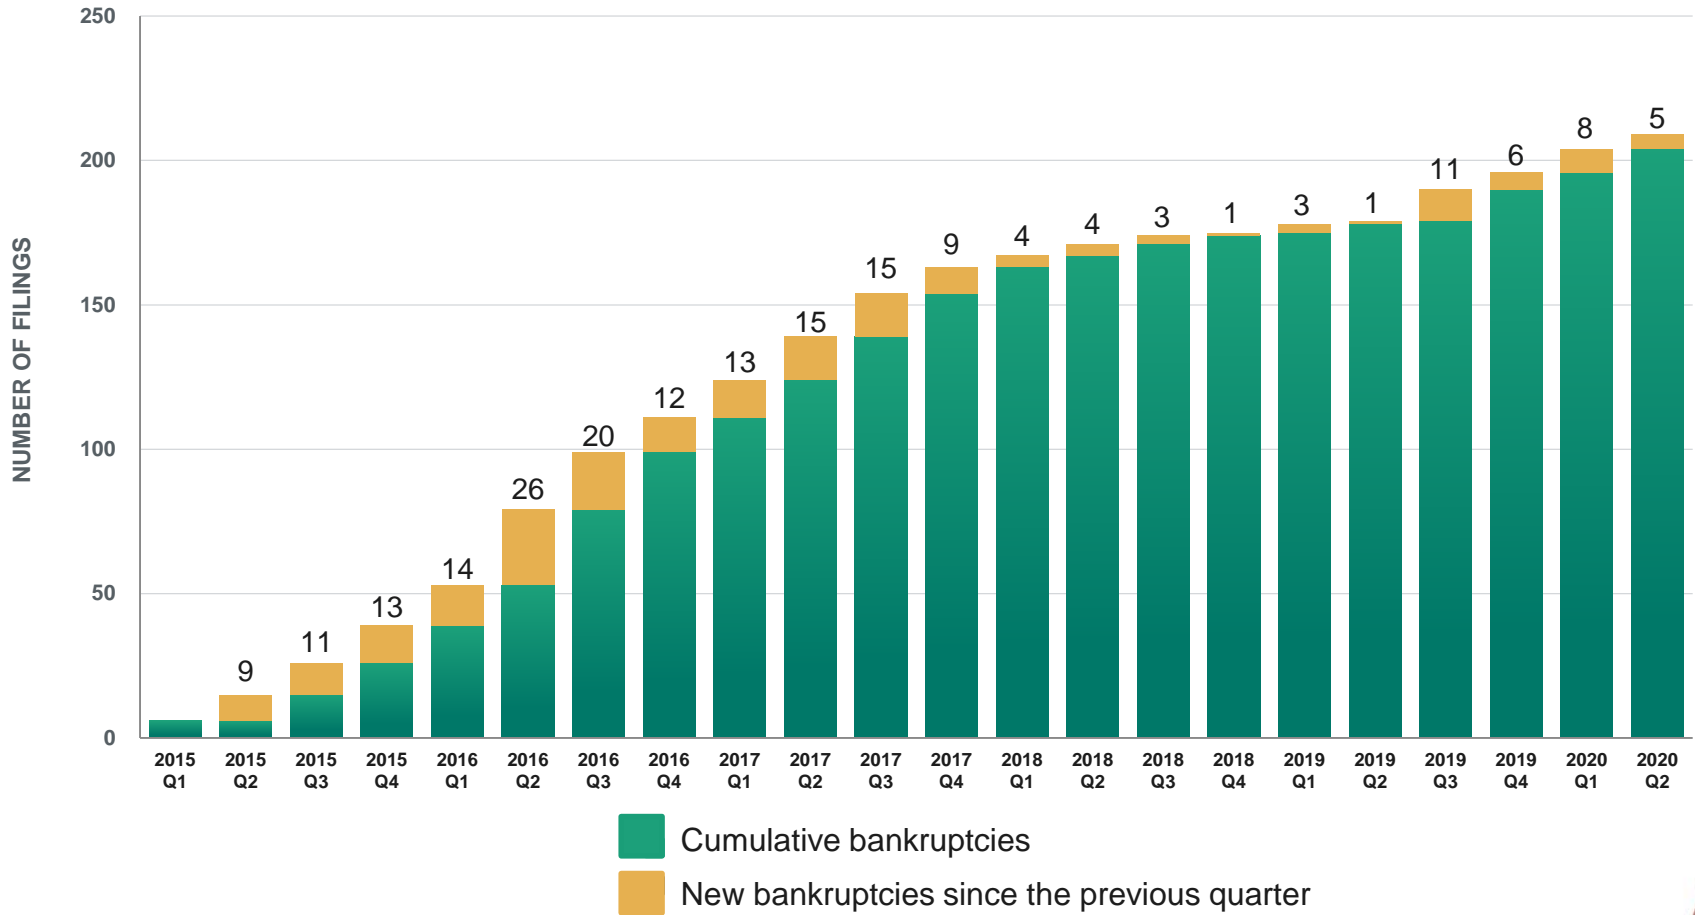

Our lawyers have played a key role in a number of high-profile E&P, midstream, and oilfield service matters, including asset sales, refinancings, debt restructurings and Chapter 11 cases, representing debtors, creditors, energy lenders, and private equity investors.

Haynes and Boone publishes companion reports on producers in the Oil Patch Bankruptcy Monitor, and for midstream companies in the Midstream Report. For additional information on the industry, please see these reports and the Haynes and Boone Borrowing Base Redeterminations Survey and Energy Bank Price Deck Survey as indicators of the impact of market conditions.
